DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-2, 5-6, 9-10 and 13 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ketcham (US 6,195,589 B1) in view of Henrie et al. (US 6,519,144 B1).

Ketcham teach a personal digital assistant (12, fig. 1) comprising:

- A housing (9, fig. 1)
- A liquid crystal display panel (19, fig. 1) for displaying information stored in the personal digital assistant
- A slot and a latch (not shown) (see col.3, lines 17-19)
- A first connector (34, fig. 1) comprising a plurality of contacts (shown in fig. 1, not numbered) installed on a second side (bottom side of 9) of the housing for transmitting electric power and data
- A digital image capture device (10, fig. 1) which is detachable from the personal digital assistant, comprising: a second connector (36, fig. 1)

- corresponding to the first connector, comprising a plurality of corresponding contacts (shown in fig. 1, not numbered) for transmitting data
- Wherein the digital image capture device further comprises a switch (48, fig. 2) for switching on or switching off the digital image capture device (see col. 4, lines 2-8) (claims 5 and 13)
  - Wherein the digital image capture device further comprises a base (26, fig. 1) which is approximately perpendicular with the housing of the personal digital assistant (shown in fig. 1) for leaning on the personal digital assistant when the digital image capture device is connected to the personal digital assistant (claim 6)

Ketcham fails to teach a slot installed on a first side of the housing, a latch for matching the slot and a release button provided by the digital image capture device (claims 1-2 and 9-10).

Henrie teaches a PDA comprising a slot (60, fig. 3) on a bottom side of a housing (not numbered), a latch (39, fig. 9A) on a PDA cradle unit for mating the slot, and a release button (38, fig. 9A) for disengaging the latch and the slot.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the device of Ketcham with the slot, latch and release button taught by Henrie for engaging and disengaging the PDA.

3. Claims 3 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ketcham in view of Henrie et al, further in view of Cha et al. (US 6,146,210).

Ketcham in view of Henrie et al discloses the claimed invention except the personal digital assistant further comprising a plurality of protruding plugs installed on a surface of the housing, and the digital image capture device further comprising a plurality of sockets corresponding to the protruding plugs of the personal digital assistant for precisely engaging with the personal digital assistant.

Cha et al teaches a personal digital assistant (10, fig. 1) comprising mating connectors (30 and 40, fig. 3) including a plurality of protruding plugs (48, fig. 3), and a plurality of sockets (38, fig. 3) corresponding to the protruding plugs for precise engagement.

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the device of Ketcham modified by Henrie et al with the plugs and sockets taught by Cha for the purpose of precise engagement of the personal digital assistant and the digital image capture device.

4. Claims 7-8 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ketcham in view of Henrie et al, further in view of Kim (US 6,301,098 B1).

Ketcham in view of Henrie et al discloses the claimed invention except the digital image capture device further comprises a movable lens unit which is capable of being adjusted pivotally to a predetermined position for capturing images (claims 7-8 and 14).

Kim teaches an image capture device (172, fig. 2) comprising a movable lens unit (172b, fig. 2) which is capable of being pivotally adjusted through a hinge (172c, fig. 2) to a predetermined position for capturing images.

Art Unit: 2835

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the device of Ketcham modified by Henrie et al. with the image capture device taught by Kim for easily capturing images.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. Claims 4 and 12 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

6. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: The best prior art of record, Ketcham (US 6,195,589 B1), Henrie et al. (US 6,519,144 B1), Kim (US 6,301,098 B1) and Cha et al. (US 6,146,210), taken alone or in combination, fails to teach or reasonably suggest a personal digital assistant comprising a first connector having fourteen pins, and a image capture device comprising a second connector having fourteen receiving holes for matching with the corresponding pins as set forth in claims 4 and 12.
